

Family-Oriented Global Poultry Provider Chooses OneAmerica
Harrison Poultry, in business since 1958, brings aboard new retirement recordkeeper

INDIANAPOLIS (Nov. 15, 2020) — The Retirement Services division of OneAmerica® welcomes Harrison Poultry as a new retirement plan client. Harrison Poultry is a family-oriented company taking pride in producing distinctive poultry products that are distributed globally.

“As a leading employer in the Southeastern U.S. with more than 62 years in business, we are focused on rewarding those employees who are dedicated to providing wholesome nutrition in kitchens around the world, and a great retirement is part of that,” said David Bleth, president and CEO of Harrison Poultry. “We selected OneAmerica because of its focus on community and relationships, a perfect fit for our culture.”

The relationship with OneAmerica brings financial wellness resources to over 1,800 employees by providing personalized retirement strategies, including a custom website and educational resources for the Bethlehem, Georgia, company’s dedicated workforce, said plan advisor Jason Chepenik of Orlando-based Chepenik Financial, a OneDigital Company.

“Harrison Poultry is a multi-generational company that blends together state-of-the-art practices with a family feel,” said Chepenik. “Harrison Poultry believes in the value and power of relationships and found a great fit with OneAmerica, a like-minded company that understands what’s important to Harrison Poultry and its participants.”

“Relationships mean everything to us, and truly getting to know our customers gives us the ability to customize plan design, education and solutions to match each client’s unique mission,” said Sandy McCarthy, president of Retirement Services at OneAmerica. “We’re so thrilled to welcome Harrison Poultry and its participants, and we look forward to serving this unique plan.”

OneAmerica is the marketing name for the companies of OneAmerica.
